

Pfineas Starmantle Back Story

Pfineas Starmantle is the only son of Aramil Starmantle and his wife Drusilia. He is their oldest child. He also has a little sister named Lia. Pfineas and Lia are very close. Aramil is a merchant of some renown in Pfineas' homeland of Evereska.

Growing up Pfineas was a trouble maker. He had an affinity for illusion spells and would use them to play pranks and cause mischief. This eventually led to problems when Pfineas played a prank on a member of Elven nobility and in an attempt to smooth things over was thrown out of his home by his father.

Pfineas roamed the Forgotten Realms for several years, relying on his illusions to survive. He eventually made his way to Whillip.

In Whillip he was discovered by a member of the wizards guild, when the wizard saw Pfineas use his magic to distract a merchant so he could steal food. Seeing a lot of potential in the young elf the wizard invited him to study at the wizards guild. This offer was met with reluctance, but was eventually accepted by Pfineas who was tired of living on the streets.

Pfineas was an excellent student. He was quick to learn different forms of magic and excelled at illusions. Eventually he decided to focus his efforts on illusions and become an Illusionist.

He is embarrassed of his past and has told the people of Whillip that his parents were killed by ogres during a raid on his village. He longs to become an adventurer and Illusionist of some renown so that he can return home a hero and be reunited with his sister.
